ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

It's more important now than ever to create a healthy and enriched environment for the human being. Starting from proper sleep habits to reducing anxiety, good life style choices to effective interaction, there is a need to analyse the behavioural dynamics. When we glance at the present day society, we come across with varied behavioural issues in the context of family, workplace, educational institutes and society at large. The academicians and professionals have to work together to trace out the factors which promote motivation and healthy behavioural functioning. Keeping that in mind, in this annual conference of Indian Academy of Applied Psychology, IAAP-2018, we are going to emphasise conceptual underpinnings, empirical evidence base and practical applications of psychology in terms of paper presentations, symposiums and invited speeches on the theme “Psychology for Development and Wellness: Academic and Professional Partnership”.

There is a need to identify how psychology can contribute to human well-being at a societal level including issues such as health, education, women empowerment, elderly care, clean environment, intergroup relations, national integration and even political disputes. We live in varied socio-cultural contexts across our nation. That is why our problems and the way we approach these problems to find solutions naturally vary. Sharing of information among our psychology fraternity will undoubtedly lead to mutual benefit. I am confident that the present conference would help us in fulfilling this purpose.
